

New Bank and Trust Company to Have Fine Home

The Commercial Trust Co., which filed its articles of incorporation a few weeks ago will occupy the first and part of the second floor of the new building which is to be erected on the former Union Grill site on King street, Honolulu. The Union Grill will occupy no part of the building, construction for which is already under way.

Emory & Webb, Honolulu architects, have prepared the plans and specifications for a three story, concrete building. Charles Ingverson has the contract for the building.

Permanent officers of the bank have not been announced as yet. The temporary officers, for purposes of incorporation are: James W. Russell, president; P. C. Beamer, treasurer; Fred Patterson, Senator Russell's law partner, secretary. Other incorporators are: Herbert A. Truslow, treasurer and manager of the Security Trust Co., Hilo and William Williamson of Williamson & Buttolph, Honolulu.

Capital is $250,000. The company has issued an invitation to the people of Hawaii to join in the companies and is placing on the market through Williamson & Buttolph of Honolulu and the Security Trust Co., of Hilo, a limited number of shares at $12.50 per share. The capital of the Commercial Trust Co. is $250,000. The company proposes to immediately organize and will own the controlling interest in the Hawaii Bank of Commerce. Both institutions under one management, will be housed in the new building.

The estimate is made that the new building will be ready for occupancy about August 1. The bank and trust company will occupy the first floor and a part of the second and the remaining portions of the building will be rented as offices. In the back part of the second floor the bank will have its board of directors' room and a men's locker room.

The front of the building will be of concrete and marble construction, with a marble base course. The bank will have Columbia marble tile floors and the counters will be of San Saba marble, a Texas marble, with verde antique marble for the bases and trimmings.

The Waterhouse Co., is furnishing all the bronze grill work, the vault doors and linings and the safety deposit boxes and fittings, both for the vaults and the counters. One side of the lower floor will be used as the trust and real estate department and the other by the bank proper.

The same executive staff and directors will control the affairs of both the bank and the trust company and the inauguration of the two institutions under one management and in the same general offices will mark a new feature in banking and fiduciary service in Hawaii.

The organizers point out that there is a demand and a real need for such a combined institution, or affiliation of the purpose of affording service to the smaller business interests that seek greater independence, and it is the plan to guard for all time against any small group control, by limiting the number of shares that any one person may acquire including persons in nearly every business, profession and calling, as well as every nationality in the islands.

The directorate of the companies will be representatives of the classes nationalities and businesses as represented by the list of stockholders and will include men on each of the four principal islands of the group, a working quorum to consist of residents of Honolulu.

While these companies are independent of all others, they will begin business, it is stated, with strong connections with other financial institutions in Hawaii and on the mainland and also with a number of foreign banking institutions. The closest affiliation will exist with the Security Trust Co., the People's Bank of Hilo and the Bank of Kauai of Kapaa. The People's Bank has branches also in Kona, Hamakua and Kohala.

The Hawaii Bank of Commerce will conduct a general banking business in all its branches, giving particular attention to commercial, savings, collections and foreign exchange.

The Commercial Trust Co. will operate departments devoted to stocks and bonds, real estate, trust and agency, insurance and safe deposit box service.

A feature of the stock and bond department will be the handling of listed mainland securities, through the house of E. F. Hutton & Co., of New York and San Francisco.

THEATERS

Bryant Washburn

Peppier wooing, kickless kisses, a frisky papa who is his son's rival—these are some of the features of Bryant Washburn's hilarious Paramount comedy, "An Amateur Devil." It is said Mr. Washburn has the best role of his screen career in this picture. Ann May, who was with Charles Ray in "Paris Green," plays opposite the star.

Both his father and his girl were disgusted because his love-making had all the fervor of a bottle of lemon soda.

Dad was somewhat of a stepper in his early days and to make his son wake up, creates the impression that he is after the same girl, with matrimonial intent.

And then things happen thick and fast to make "An Amateur Devil" an entertainment that will surely be enjoyed.

Dustin Farnum.

"Durand of the Bad Lands" is one of the best western pictures seen here, and Dustin Farnum, always a favorite, has in the role of Dick Durand one of his greatest parts. William Fox has staged the production with excellent taste and the direction by Richard Stanton is exceptionally fine.

"Durand of the Bad Lands" is a real western story in the sense that the public understands the word western. There is all of the dash and the thrill in it that there was in the early days of the great west. The scenes are laid chiefly on the Mexican border and the action starting with the very first scene, continues without abatement until the end.

Winifred Kingston makes a delightful heroine.

Tsuru Aoki.

All the romance and mystery of the Orient, combined with the fire and dash of the Occident, give to "The Breath of the Gods," a wide appeal to the audience. Tsuru Aoki, the Japanese Bernhard of the screen who became so popular as leading woman with Sessue Hayakawa, has the principal role in this feature, and proves her right to be a real star. Her acting is exquisite throughout.

Gladys Leslie.

"The Midnight Bride" bristles with entertainment. As its title suggests it is a picture that treats of the sensational adventure of a secret wedding. The thought of marriage is in itself full of appealing interest.

When this exploit is linked with the original fact of a marriage accomplished with a marriage license made out to a different person than the bride in the case, it assumes great dramatic importance.

"The Midnight Bride," therefore, has its greatest entertainment value from the unusualness of its story. Gladys Leslie is a charming little star who has nationwide appeal.

Inside the Cup.

Winston Churchill's celebrated novel, "The Inside of the Cup," in the screen adaptation is an even stronger, more dramatic expose of the hypocrisy of some so-called "pillars of the church" than the book description. It is a tense, absorbing production, based on the Biblical narrative of "whited sepulchres" that outwardly are beautiful but inwardly are full of dead men's bones and uncleanness.

The characters for the most part are typical of big business interests who control the pulse strings of industrial, financial and the economic life of the big cities; whose principal current in life is dividends; whose religion is a cloak for Sunday righteousness, while on Monday they rouge the poor and save their consciences with contributions to the church.

The results are appalling. Sorrow, misery and even Christianity is but baptised heathenism. To save pride and respectability Edon Parr, the leader of the group, banishes his own son and daughter because they will not stoop to his injustices.

But in the end comes a minister, who perceiving the truth, fearlessly and boldly denounces these scribes and pharisees and brings them to their knees by putting the fear of God into their hearts.

One Hopeful Feature.

Christopher Morley reprints in the New York Evening Post the following "full-page sable-ruled advt." in a "garment weekly":

"You will share our deep sorrow at the death of Mr. ——. He was the founder and organizer of the company, which will continue to bear his name. Due to the discontinuance of business for a week, there has accumulated an enormous stock of suits and coats which we will dispose of at an unusually low price. This is an opportunity which you cannot afford to miss."

"Only the artists can know what the pictures mean."
"Then I think they ought to hang them, too!"—London Opinion.

Dr. E. S. Goodhue has resigned as corresponding secretary of the Civic Improvement association of Molokai. Miss Sproul and several friends of Honolulu have been spending a couple of weeks on Molokai.

The governor has been asked to extend the area of land allotted for a public park and playground for children on Molokai. The piece given is too small for the purpose, and adjoining government lots would bring the allotment to 12 acres.

Mr. Pickop of the geodetic survey has returned to Honolulu.

John Seabury of Boston, who has just made a tour of Hawaii, including the volcano, Hamakua coast and Kona, then Haleakala, Iao Valley, Makawao, Kula and Kaunapali, arrived with Mrs. Goodhue at Pukoo on a sampan from Lahaina, May 7. Mr. Seabury has been traveling for the last five years and says that Hawaii exceeds his "fondest expectations."

Bonds have been issued for the appointment of E. K. Duvauchelle as postmaster at Roosevelt postoffice.
